

Experiments on behavior in virtual landscape

Hello. First of all, thank you for participating in the experiment.

This experiment is conducted under the supervision of the Department of Landscape Architecture at Istanbul Technical University and the Department of Landscape Architecture at Kongju National University to explore the relationship between people in a virtual landscape. In this experiment, the first experimental partner the volunteers applied for and the second and third experimental partners designated by our research team will be put into the experiment. Before the survey, our research team would have informed you who the second and third subjects were, so please proceed with the survey based on this information.

First anchor: The participant applied to the experiment with you. This first anchor should be your lover.

Second anchor: The person designated by our research team.

Third anchor: The person designated by our research team.

As soon as the questionnaire is completed and all answers are received, you will be contacted by the person conducting this research to coordinate the schedule of this experiment. This survey will last about 15 minutes, and the experiment will last about an hour. During future experiments, we do not ask for personal information other than the contact information you fill out to inform the experiment schedule. If you feel uncomfortable while conducting the survey or experiment, you can request to stop at any time. Also, all information collected will be used for research purposes only. When the final result is published, we inform you that all raw data will be destroyed except for responses as statistical results. Until the final research results are published, you must keep the confidentiality of everything you will experience, including this survey. This is to prevent contamination of other experimental participants.

Finally, you must complete this survey by yourself. In answering the questionnaire, you must not consult or ask questions to the people participating in the experiment or other people. Please respond alone in an independent space. Data answered in the questionnaire will undergo cross-validation, and if the answers are judged to be contaminated, it is difficult to participate in any future experiments. When you complete all experiments, you will receive a small reward. If you require additional information related to the experiment, please contact the person experimenting. Thank you
